

Community Food

Glasgow is home to a well developed community food sector. Its collective voice is Glasgow Community Food Network (GCFN). Many hundreds of people benefit from involvement in community food projects including allotment sites and community gardens across the city as well as community cooking and meals. Community food projects impact positively on our communities wellbeing and do much to help the local environment. Growing food and eating locally sourced produce also helps to reduce carbon emissions, and growing spaces bring increased biodiversity. The Community Food sector has played a critical part in the city's response to COVID-19. Much more needs to be done to support the sector to be sustainable and ensure everyone can access local community food projects. Glasgow City Food Plan actions 14-26 relate to this theme.
